RESTORING PROPERTY RIGHTS FOR ALBERTA FARMERS

Submitted by Government of Alberta

Alberta is restoring private property rights for farmers by removing unnecessary regulatory barriers that restrict how they manage water on their own cropland.

This fall, Alberta's government will remove Water Act approval requirements for routine agricultural activities involving ephemeral water bodies and temporary and seasonal wetlands on private cropland.

"Farmers should not have to spend thousands of dollars and wait on government approval to carry out routine work on their own land. We are restoring private property rights and getting government out of the way where it doesn't need to be. These common-sense changes will save farmers time and money and give them greater control over how they manage their own property."

Grant Hunter, Minister of Environment and Protected Areas

The changes respond directly to concerns raised by

Alberta farmers and agricultural organizations about unnecessary regulatory burden.

Under the current system, routine farming activities can trigger regulatory requirements if they affect a temporary or seasonal wetland. In some cases, a farmer may have to hire a qualified wetland professional, complete an assessment, wait for government review and pay wetland replacement costs before proceeding.

"Farmers have faced unnecessary administrative burden for routine low-risk activities on their own land for too long. These common-sense changes will give producers more flexibility to manage water and improve field conditions while providing practical tools to improve productivity and manage water on their operations."

Tara Sawyer, Minister of Agriculture and Irrigation

The changes will make it easier for farmers to cultivate, seed, spray, ditch, drain and infill on their own cropland without going through an unnecessary approval process.

"This change allows early treatment of excess temporary water on the landscape which will help pulse farmers reduce the risks associated with waterlogged soils. Pulse crops such as peas and lentils are highly vulnerable to excess moisture. It will give pulse farmers more flexibility to make effective water management decisions and provide the best opportunity for healthy, productive crops while still supporting core wetland habitat."

Will Muller, chair, Alberta Pulse Growers

Under the new approach, those approval and replacement requirements will be removed for specified farming activities on private cropland. Water associated with these exemptions will continue to be managed on the farmer's property, helping ensure neighbouring landowners and downstream infrastructure are protected.

"Temporary standing water causes production inefficiencies and by managing these short-lived wet areas and reducing their impacts earlier in the season, it allows farmers to have greater efficiency in the field."

Sarah Weigum, chair, Alberta-British Columbia Seed Growers Association

Instead of requiring a lengthy Water Act approval, Alberta will develop a clear code of practice for tile drainage on private cropland.

Alberta's government is also reducing red tape for farmers who use tile drainage to manage excess subsurface water and improve growing conditions.

"Farmers care about wetlands, the environment and the wildlife that lives on the landscape. Water, in wet years like this year, can have a detrimental and long-term impact through flooding and erosion. These management changes will allow farmers to protect our soils while continuing to provide habitat for birds, mammals and other species."

Andre Harpe, chair, Alberta Canola

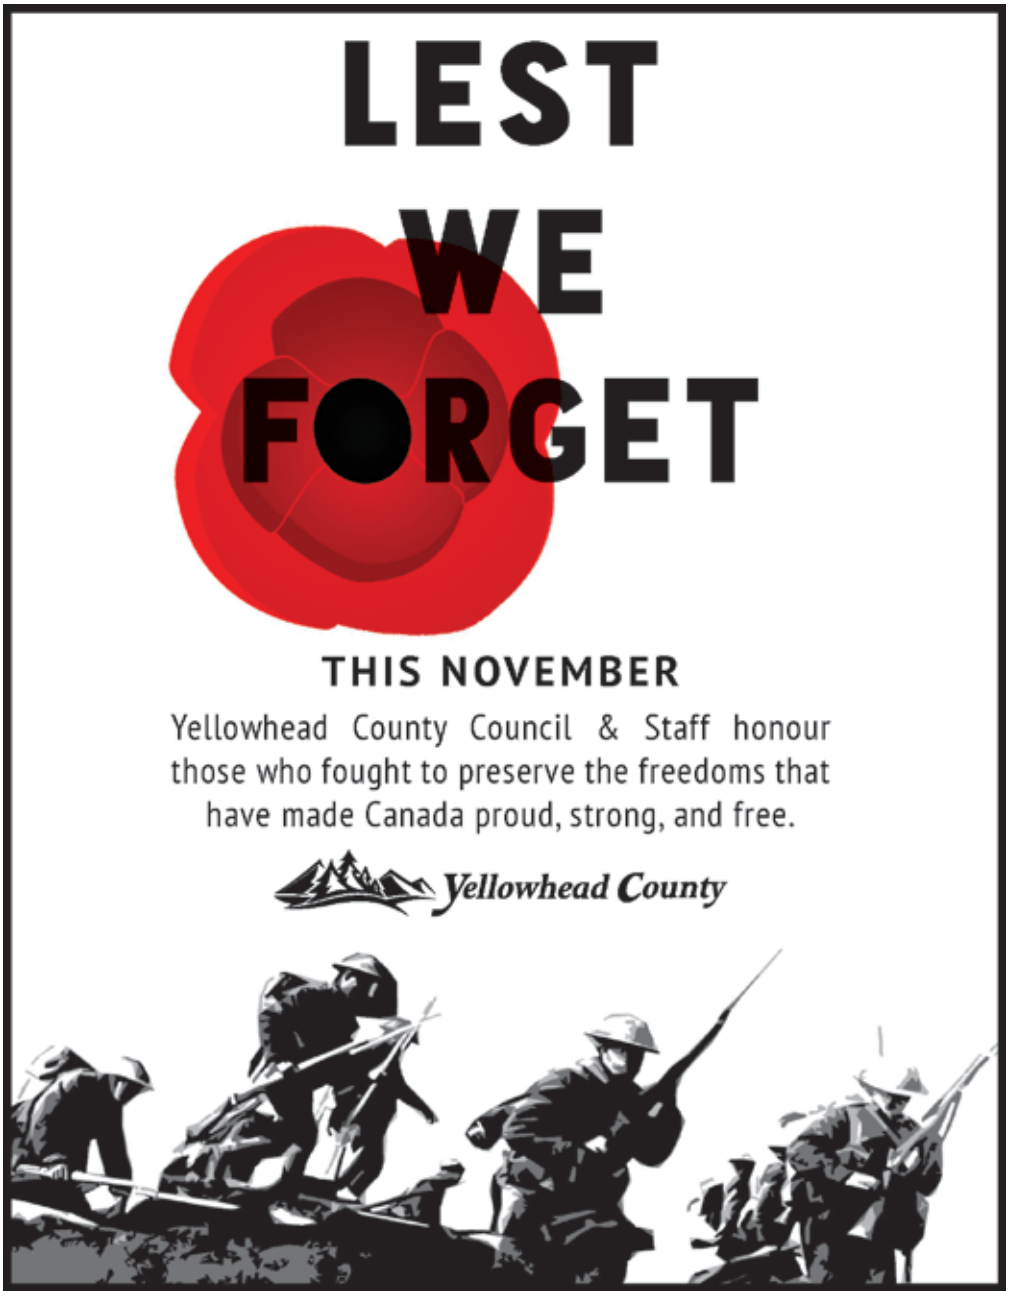

The code will establish straightforward, enforceable standards while allowing farmers to proceed through notification rather than a full regulatory approval. Where water could affect downstream landowners, their consent will be required.

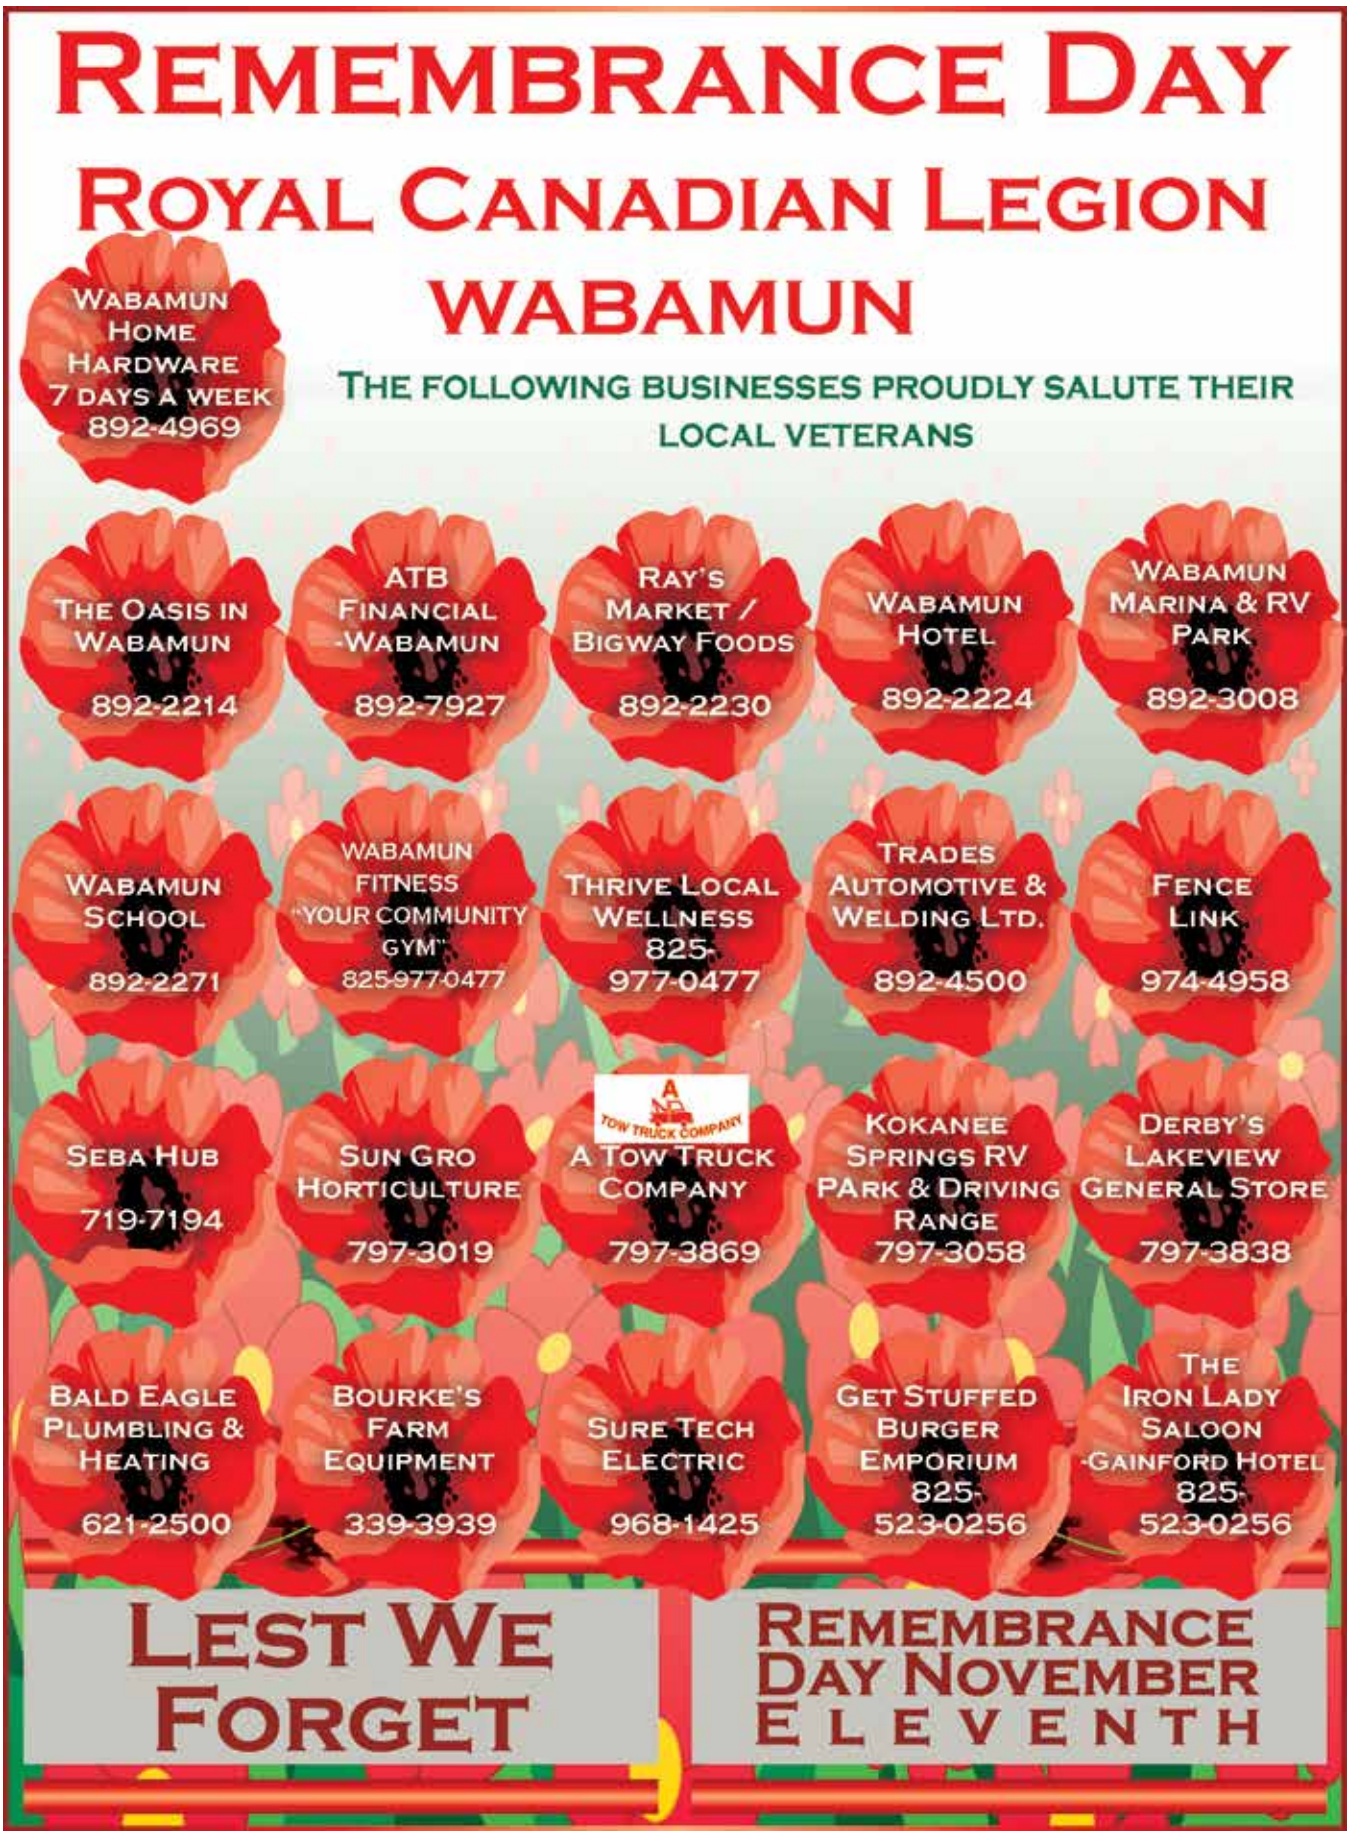

"Respect for property rights means trusting landowners to responsibly manage their land, and Alberta farmers have demonstrated that responsibility for generations. These changes recognize that routine farming decisions are best made by the people who know the land best."

Peter J. Dobbie, KC, farmers' and property rights advocate of Alberta

Together, these reforms mean fewer unnecessary approvals, lower costs and less time waiting on government.

Alberta will continue removing regulatory barriers that do not provide a meaningful benefit while maintaining appropriate protections for neighbouring landowners, infrastructure and higher-value wetlands.

COPING WITH CONDENSATION AND OTHER HOME MOISTURE ISSUES

Finding the right moisture balance in a home can be challenging. Too little moisture and a home can be plagued by static electricity and interior spaces that can feel dry and uncomfortable. But too much moisture in a home may make it susceptible to mold, mildew and insect infestations. Moisture also can rot wood and cause unsightly stains on walls and ceilings.

Maintaining humidity in the optimal indoor range helps to keep the home safe, reduce energy consumption and keep a home's occupants healthy. Damp conditions can lead to the growth of fungi, viruses and bacteria and may exacerbate people's asthma and allergies. The ideal relative humidity range of a home should be between 40 to 50, according to heating and cooling experts and the Environmental Prevention Agency. Humidity should be even lower in the winter to prevent condensation on windows and other surfaces. Lower relative humidity also reduces the out-gassing of volatile organic compounds, or VOCs.

Measure humidity with a hygrometer to get an accurate assessment. If the humidity levels fall above or below the desired range, action should be taken. Homeowners dealing with excessive moisture can try these remedies.

· Ventilate areas of the home. Ventilation can be the first step to reducing indoor humidity. Target the areas that create the most moisture, such as kitchens and bathrooms. Turn on venting fans to remove moist air from the bathroom during showers and baths. Exhaust hoods can control humidity from cooking in the kitchen. When possible, open windows on dry days to help air out damp spaces.

· Rely on fans. Use fans to circulate the air and prevent moist air from pooling in certain locations. Fans also will help increase ventilation.

· Keep gutters and downspouts clean. Prevent water from pooling around the foundation of a home and infiltrating the basement or crawlspace. Direct gutter water further away from the house if possible, and keep gutters free of obstructions.

· Service HVAC systems regularly. Routine inspections of heating and cooling systems can identify any problems, such as clogged air-conditioning drain lines or faulty operation, that can contribute to moisture problems.

· Beef up insulation. Insulate cold water pipes and look into insulated toilet tanks that will help eliminate condensation issues. Sealing out moisture in a basement or crawlspace also can help. Vapor barriers can eliminate a great deal of moisture coming into the home.

· Address any plumbing leaks. Make sure you trace possible leaks to their sources and have them repaired. Constantly dripping water can add to humidity levels and create other problems.

· Use a dehumidifier. If all other efforts have been tried, a dehumidifier unit can help remove excess moisture from the air. Dehumidifiers are particularly helpful in basements where moisture can collect.

Controlling moisture in a home results in a safer and healthier space.

ALBERTA STUDENTS RANK AMONG WORLD'S BEST

Submitted by Government of Alberta

Alberta students continue to be among the highest achievers in Canada and the world, according to 2025 Programme for International Student Assessment (PISA) results.

The latest PISA results show Alberta's 15-year-old students are among the top performers in Canada and internationally. Alberta ranked first among provinces in science and reading and second in mathematics, behind only Quebec, while scoring above both the Canadian and international averages in all three subjects.

"These outstanding results show Alberta students continue to excel on the world stage. They are a testament to the hard work of students, teachers, families and school communities across our province. Alberta's government will continue to provide students with the strong foundation they need for future success."

Demetrios Nicolaides, Minister of Education and Childcare

Alberta's results were also comparable to those of leading education systems such as Singapore, Japan, Korea and Estonia, with several results statistically tied.

"Alberta's strong PISA results reflect the strength of teaching and learning across our province. At Christ The Redeemer Catholic Schools, we are pleased to contribute to that success with a strong focus on academic rigour, ensuring every student is supported to achieve, flourish and excel."

Dr. Matthew McIsaac, chair, Christ The Redeemer Catholic Schools

Continued participation in PISA provides valuable insight into how students are performing compared to their peers across Canada and other countries, benchmarks student achievement against national and international standards, identifies areas of strength and supports ongoing improvements in curriculum and classroom instruction.

"We are proud to see CBE students achieving strong results at a global scale. These outcomes reflect the positive impact of quality teaching and a strong system focus on student success across our increasingly diverse school district."

Laura Hack, chair, Calgary Board of Education

NEW WAY FOR ALBERTANS TO RECEIVE CANCER SCREENING NOTIFICATIONS

Submitted by PCA

Primary Care Alberta's (PCA) Screening Programs is updating its communication methods to better serve Albertans.

Cancer screening notifications are moving towards becoming paperless. Starting in the fall of 2026, mailed invitation and reminder notifications for cancer screening will be phased out when possible and patients will get notifications and information through MyHealthAlberta's MyChart online platform.

The Alberta Cervical Cancer Screening Program implemented this change first on September 15, 2026. The Alberta Colorectal Cancer Screening Program and Alberta Breast Cancer Screening Program will follow in 2027.

"Albertans increasingly expect to access services and information digitally. Moving cancer screening notifications to MyChart is a practical step that improves access to personal health information, supports participation in life-saving screening programs, and ensures we are delivering services in a more efficient and sustainable way."

Justin Wright, Minister of Primary and Preventative Health Services

Patients not enrolled in MyChart will continue to receive printed letters. Normal screening results will be available via MyChart or communicated through the patient's appropriate care provider. Abnormal test results will be mailed, available via MyChart or communicated through the patient's appropriate care provider.

"These changes are designed to make it easier to review messages, alerts and results, better keep track of your screenings and remind you when to book an appointment. Regular screening is the best way to find cancer early, before symptoms appear and when treatment is likely to be most effective."

Kimberley Simmonds, CEO of Primary Care Alberta

This shift ensures Albertans have improved access to their health information, when and where they want it. Albertans who are able and not already signed up, are encouraged to set up a MyChart account by visiting myhealth.alberta.ca/help/KB/setting-up-myhealth-records.

If you still receive paper letters and are concerned your mailing address is incorrect, call Primary and Preventative Health Services at 310-0000 (toll free) then dial 780-427-1432. If you'd prefer to make these changes by mail or in person, please visit Alberta Health Care Insurance Plan to find out how: alberta.ca/ahcip.

For additional information about screening, talk to your primary care provider or visit screeningforlife.ca.

Care is a lifelong commitment for Primary Care Alberta. We plan, fund and support primary healthcare across the province, improving access to care providers and offering front-line services through Health Link 811 and public health teams. Throughout the health journey, we are by your side – managing, preventing and reducing illness. Along with our partners, we nurture the connections our communities need to thrive and strengthen the health of all Albertans.

RIGHTING A HISTORIC WRONG FOR ALBERTA RANCHERS

Submitted by Government of Alberta

Alberta is reopening a registration program so eligible ranchers can have their long-standing water rights recognized.

For generations, Alberta's ranchers have relied on water sources on public land to raise livestock and support their operations. Now, Alberta's government is giving eligible ranchers a new opportunity to have long-standing agricultural water use properly recognized.

When Alberta's Traditional Agricultural Registration program closed in 2001, grazing leaseholders on Crown land could not apply directly because they did not own the land. Registrations were submitted on their behalf, and subsequent reviews have identified errors and omissions in some historic records that may have left eligible agricultural water use unrecognized.

The change follows a review undertaken with the Alberta Grazing Leaseholders Association after concerns were raised about inaccuracies in historic registrations on grazing leases. That work confirmed examples of errors and omissions that could affect ranchers' access to water sources that otherwise may have qualified for registration.

"Ranchers should not lose recognition of long-standing water rights because of mistakes or gaps in government records from more than two decades ago. We are righting that historic wrong and giving eligible ranchers a fair opportunity to correct the record and have the water use they have relied on for generations properly recognized."

Grant Hunter, Minister of Environment and Protected Areas

Alberta is reopening the registration process for eligible historical agricultural water use on unpatented Crown land. This will give ranchers an opportunity to correct the record, have eligible long-standing water use reviewed and receive the recognition and priority associated with that historical use.

The reopened program applies to eligible agricultural water use that occurred before Jan. 1, 1999. Applications will be reviewed using available historical information, including aerial imagery and water well drilling records where appropriate.

About 6,800 registrations on unpatented Crown land may be eligible for review through the reopened program.

"Alberta's producers have been responsible stewards of our land and water for generations. Reopening this program gives eligible ranchers a fair opportunity to have long-standing water use recognized, helping support the continued success of Alberta's agricultural sector while improving the accuracy of provincial water records."

Tara Sawyer, Minister of Agriculture and Irrigation

"Ranchers should not be stuck with a paperwork error they had no hand in. This gives grazing leaseholders a clear, straightforward way to get their water use recognized and keep doing what they do best, raising one of Alberta's greatest products."

Todd Loewen, Minister of Forestry and Parks

"Alberta Grazing Leaseholders Association appreciates the government recognizing this long-standing issue and giving eligible ranchers a fair opportunity to have their historical water use reviewed."

Darwayne Claypool, chairman, Alberta Grazing Leaseholders Association

By reopening the program, Alberta's government is providing a practical path to correct those historic records while improving the accuracy of the province's water information.

SUDOKU of the week

Here's How It Works: Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!
